VOLUNTEER CREW.

Heroic Work When the City of Chicago Was Disabled.

It was 9:40 Sunday night when the steamer City of Chicago was disabled a mile out of Chicago. Mate W. J. Russell and Clerk C. K. Farmer appealed to Capt. McIntosh to be allowed to take a life boat and start for Chicago. There was something of a sea and there were threatenings of a heavy storm. The captain thought some passing steamer would pick them up but he reluctantly consented that the trip be attempted.

A boat was lowered and Mate Russell called for a volunteer crew and the following responded: C. K. Farmer, clerk; A. Worley and Tim Daley, wheelmen; A. Hurley, watchman; Fred Collins, E. Sullivan, F. Sedgwick, sailors.

It was a perilous trip at best but the crew was equal to the task. The rain fell in clouds and the wind blew 40 miles per hour. Six hours later the brave crew of eight volunteers was picked up four miles from Chicago by the tug Mosher.

But whatever may spring from an honest observance of treaties and contracts between nations and individuals, there can be no peace with the enemy. Fire and the army in which Robbie Rofe and his four comrades served that sad night will never be disbanded. We honor and we love the men and women whose love of country contributed to the victories at Manila and Santiago. We revere the dead and love the living when patriotism has kept intact all that our forefathers handed down to us.

We have naught but gratitude and cheers for the officers and men in our army and navy and with uncovered heads we salute not only the gallant commander of the Oregon, who is temporarily abiding in our village but every man and boy who served in the late war with Spain. Our hearts go out in tender sympathy to the relatives and friends of the American officers and privates whose lives were sacrificed in that struggle.

But the exercises of this day are in commemoration of the bravery and heroism of the men who fought their last fight at Yore's opera house and we do not belittle the fame and glory won by our soldiers and sailors when we extend to the relatives and friends of the brave fellows crushed to death at Benton Harbor by brick and timbers the same measure of sympathy and love we have for those whose dear ones fell in battle or died of wounds or disease.

incur in the service of our country. The St. Joseph and Benton Harbor firemen whose lives were lost in the attempt to save Patrick Yore's property from destruction were not less heroic than those who died at Gettysburg or Santiago.

The charge of San Juan hill will live in history and yet it was no more gallant or heroic than the charge which our fire brigade made that September night in quick and generous response to Benton Harbor's cry for support.

The next speaker was the Hon. J. W. Fletcher, who in behalf of the St. Joseph fire department presented to the mayor and city council for the people of St. Joseph the beautiful monument. After Mr. Fletcher's speech two pretty little girls, Mabel Schneider and Ella Lindt, pulled the flag from the bronze figure of a fireman holding a little child in his arms. As the flag fell and the statue saw the light of day the vast crowd broke into one mighty cheer. Amid the applause Mayor Starr arose and as soon as quiet was restored in a neat speech accepted the monument for the people of St. Joseph. Rev. L. W. Earl pronounced the benediction and the exercises were over.

Captain Clark of the battleship Oregon accompanied by his wife and daughter sat in a carriage and viewed the parade.

The fire department of St. Joseph may well feel proud of their success in erecting so fine a monument to the memory of their brave dead as can also the committee who had in charge the exercises yesterday.

WARSHIP WORSHIP.

HOW JACK "RIGS CHURCH" IN UNCLE SAM'S NAVY.

Divine Service on Sunday on Board a United States Man-of-war and How It Is Conducted—The Church Ensign and Its Meaning—The Chaplain.

When there is seen flying from the gaff of a United States man-of-war a small, white triangular pennant, bearing on its field a blue Greek cross near the pike or halyard, it is a signal that divine service is being held on board. "Rig church" is one of the regular naval orders, issued usually at about 10:30 on Sunday morning.

Church is "rigged" in various places according to the construction of the vessel and according to the weather conditions. If the day is fine and not too cold, the quarter deck will probably be selected, although in some ships it is customary to hold the service on the forward part of the gun deck. In stormy weather the berth deck below is used, where the men may be under shelter, though they are more cramped for room.

Assuming that the service is to be held on the quarter deck, the arrangements for it will proceed about like this: When the bugler gives the signal, the "church ensign" is hoisted to the gaff, and some of the men, under the direction of an officer, bestir themselves briskly in making the simple preparations which are necessary.

A table or desk, covered with the American flag, is placed at the end of the quarter deck for the chaplain. A few wardroom chairs are brought up from below and ranged along the starboard side, where the officers are to assemble, and benches or capstan bars resting on buckets make seats for the crew on the port side.

The organ—for every ship that has a chaplain is provided with an instrument of this nature—is put in a convenient place. If there is a band, and its services are desired, a few musicians are selected and stationed near by. Then the ship's bell is tolled for about five minutes, giving the officers and men, wherever they may be on board, sufficient time to assemble, if they are so inclined.

The boatswain may call down the hatchways "Silence, fore and aft, during divine service!" but it is well understood by the entire crew that the ship must be quiet now for about three-quarters of an hour. Finally the bell stops, the captain, after a glance around, makes a sign to the chaplain that all is ready, and the service begins.

How it is conducted depends upon the denomination to which the chaplain belongs, and various sects are represented among the naval clergymen. The singing, accompanied by the organ, which is played either by an officer or by some musician among the crew, is generally fine. The men enjoy it, and their voices ring out strong and fresh in the open air.

During the prayers they are required to remove their caps, but throughout the rest of the service they may remain covered. When it is over, the order to "Pipe down!" is given, and church is "unrigged." Sometimes an evening service is also held, but this is not the general custom.

Attendance at church on the warships is of course not compulsory, but the officers are expected to attend by way of furnishing an example, and most of them usually do, accompanied by perhaps about half the crew—sometimes more and sometimes less.

But by no means all the ships of the navy are provided with chaplains. For the 60 or more war vessels now effective for service there are fewer than 30 chaplains, or less than one for every two ships. They are attached to the largest and most important vessels, where their ministrations may reach the greatest number of persons.

A queer incident happened a few years ago, when one of the modern cruisers was put into commission. It had been intended that she should carry a chaplain, but when the officers' quarters were completed it was found that his room had been entirely overlooked. No accommodation for him thus being available, the ship put to sea without a chaplain and did not have one for at least two years.

In an action the chaplain's duties are with the sick and wounded. Occasionally, however, his aid has been required at the guns, and in many instances the chaplains have proved themselves heroic fighters as well as good preachers. In the old days of the navy the chaplain wore the full uniform of his rank—lieutenant, lieutenant commander or commander—but it is now customary for him to wear a suit of black or the regular costume of whatever church he represents, sometimes with the insignia of his rank upon his sleeve.—New York Tribune.

RIDING ON A DOOR.

The Steed Which a Cyclone Furnished an Impromptu Traveler.

Christian Van den Harver, familiarly known in Celina, O., as Cyclone Johnny, is perhaps the only man living that enjoys the unique distinction of having ridden a cyclone astride a house door for a distance of over a quarter of a mile. This remarkable feat was performed not as a matter of choice, but of necessity by the above named person when the cyclone swept across Celina in May, 1886.

Cyclone Johnny's description of the cyclone is graphic and thrilling. He was living at the time eight miles west of Celina, and on the night of the cyclone he and Mr. Bryan's family were watching the raging of the storm in the west. The electric display was wonderful, and to him it seemed as though the world was about to come to an end by fire. The flashes were so brilliant that the eyes could not withstand them. The family became alarmed and decided to go to the cellar for safety. The cellar was directly underneath the porch, on the west side of the house, and Harver assisted in getting the children to this place of safety, and he was the last one to leave the house. Just as he stepped upon the porch and before he released his hold upon the doorknob the storm swept down upon him in all its fury. He went sailing through the air, over the tops of trees, the uppermost branches of which tore his clothes from his body. The gait he traveled was terrific, and it seemed but a second from the time he started until he found himself safely dropped into a large field uninjured, save for the scratches inflicted upon him as he sailed over the top of the trees. This field was a little over a quarter of a mile from Mr. Bryan's house, and Harver wandered around in the darkness and driving rain until he met a searching party, among whom was Mr. Bryan, who, together with his entire family, were saved by their opportune flight to the cellar.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

The Army Officer's Trunk.

The army officer's trunk, which is an article of limited but regular sale in peace times, being sold chiefly to regular army officers, is a stout, well made trunk of rather generous proportions, so divided inside as to afford spaces for both military and civilian attire. There is a place for an officer's chapeau and one for the silk hat of a civilian and room for the different clothing, and the trunk is large enough to admit a sword laid diagonally. A trunk of this sort is made not of sole leather, as might be supposed, to withstand rough wear, but with a rigid frame, so that it can be roped or strapped on to a load or packed with other things piled on it in the exigencies of wagon or other transportation without being crushed or damaged.—New York Sun.

Broadly speaking, the essential difference between merchant ships and warships is that the former are designed to carry their loads or principal portions thereof low down in the hold, whereas warships have to carry their heavy burdens of armor and armament high up

TWO BLONDS.

One of Them Was Impolite, but the Other One Got Even.

A sallow little blond entered an electric car and sat down effusively by a very handsome blond with brown eyes.

"Oh, Harriet! I am so glad to see you! I've had so many engagements lately that I see nothing of you. How have you been?"

"Much as usual," answered the brown eyed blond.

"Are you going to the —s' little Lenten dance?"

"No."

"You aren't! Why, everybody is going."

"It will be a very populous dance."

"But why aren't you going?"

A shade of annoyance passed over the brown eyed blond's face, but she answered simply, "Because I'm not invited."

"Oh, that's too bad! I'm so sorry you were left out. And they seemed to have gone into the highways and hedges, too, from what I can hear. I'm going to wear violet silk."

"I think you might wear violet silk," said the brown eyed blond gently but distinctly, turning a searching gaze upon her companion's complexion, "if you put on plenty of powder. You are determined to wear violet silk?"

"I thought—I think"—stammered the other woman, reddening through her sallowness.

"Then be sure to remember my advice and put on plenty of powder—yes, I think in that case you might venture to wear violet silk."

The sallow blond did not say another word, but sat over ostentatiously and gave a newcomer a seat. Perhaps she had not meant to be rude, with her sorrow and her highways and hedges. But people were smiling around her, secretly glad, as we cannot help being, of witnessing the neat pat with which a skilled fencer drops a roistering and bullying antagonist.—Chicago Post.

A Nice Little Order.

A man who had "got on" in life and rapidly amassed a large fortune, on furnishing a new and luxuriously fitted house, suddenly discovered, to his great distress, that he had omitted the "harmless necessary" library. He went to a local shop and ordered a supply of books.

"What are your particular tastes?" asked the bookseller.

"Oh, I've no ideas about the matter," was the reply. "You're a bookseller—you ought to know all about it. I simply ask you to provide me with a library."

"And you have no preference?"

"No, but wait a second. I have a preference. There's a man whose books I ought to have. Now, bless me, what's his name? Shakes—Shakes—Shakes something."

"Shakespeare," suggested the bookseller.

"That's 'im—Mr. Shakespeare. Get all he's written, and see that any new books he may write are ordered for me immediately."—Pearson's Weekly.

Encouraged.

"Has my daughter been profiting by your instructions in art?" inquired Mr. Blykins.

"Yes," answered the teacher. "I was a little discouraged at first. But I can now assure you that she is getting on."

"What progress has she made?"

"She has finally become convinced that she doesn't know more about it than the old masters."—Washington Star.

SAVED BY HEROES

Steamer City of Chicago Saved Through Heroism of Engineer McClure and Oiler Taylor.

The Chicago Journal gives these particulars of the accident to the palace steamer City of Chicago:

The steamer City of Chicago was retired for the season by the breakdown of her engines in midlake Sunday night. The disaster added two more names to the list of heroes who by their disregard of danger and quick action saved a heavy loss of life. They were William J. McClure, chief engineer, and John Taylor, oiler.

The City of Chicago was going to St. Joseph with but few passengers on board, when what is called the connecting strap, a piece of solid steel four or five inches square, broke. The strap connected the engine with the paddle wheels by means of the walking beam. At the instant the engine was thus relieved of the burden of driving the paddle wheels the piston was just below the top of the cylinder, going down. There being no resistance, the piston continued going and struck the bottom of the cylinder with tremendous force.

The great steel cylinder was broken to pieces. The big walking beam, made of solid steel and weighing several tons, was broken in many places. The top of the frame carrying the beam, a piece of steel seven inches thick, was snapped. A journal weighing 50 pounds flew over into the dynamo and stayed there. The crosshead of the high-pressure cylinder, another great piece of steel, went by the board and the crosshead of the air pump, a piece of steel about two feet long and three inches in diameter, was bent six inches out of line.

In the midst of this destruction, Engineer McClure, who was sitting in his chair reading a paper when the first crash told him something was wrong, jumped to his feet, rushed to the throttle, and shut off the steam. At the same instant, Oiler Taylor—without orders—had jumped to the valves in the steam-pipe leading from the boiler to the engine and had turned them off. So quick had been the action of the two men that very little steam escaped.

Like most heroes, Engineer McClure took no credit to himself for his action. However, he bestowed unlimited praise upon Oiler Taylor for his course in so quickly shutting off the steam from the boilers on his own motion.

"I was sitting right in that chair," Mr. McClure said, "when I first received an intimation that something was wrong with the engine. Less than three minutes before I had looked it over and it was running as smoothly as it had run during the eight years it has been under my sole supervision. How I escaped the pieces of steel that fell around me I do not know. All that I realized was that something had given way and it was for me to shut off the steam. Some of the crew wanted to know how I missed being hit by a big piece of the cylinder which fell and was found directly in my course from the chair to the throttle. I do not know how I escaped it, but all I know was that I ran to the throttle, shut off the steam and then began to think about what had happened."

Mr. McClure has been in charge of the engine of the City of Chicago since 1890. He had come to regard it with the affection of a father. During all the eight years of constant service not a mishap had occurred, and his voice had a tone of sadness as he gazed over the wreckage today.

Mechanists began at noon to take away the broken pieces and to see how serious the damage was. It is not thought that the great piece of steel known as the "rod plate" of the engine is broken, and the damage to the high-pressure cylinder can not be determined until the entire engine goes to shipyard for a rebuild. The low-pressure cylinder, however, is a total wreck. It is thought that the cost of repairs will be as large as if an entire new engine had to be provided.

Among the other members of the crew and the few passengers it was at first believed that the entire bottom of the steamer was gone so great was the crash, but when it was found that the wreckage did not extend beyond the engine room the incipient panic was allayed. The lifeboat was manned and started for shore with the view of obtaining a tug to tow the steamer back to port. The boat missed the City of Louisville of the same line, which took the disabled boat in tow and the little lifeboat and its occupants did not reach here until 6 o'clock yesterday morning, having been out in the lake throughout the violent thunderstorm of the early morning.

So far as the examination has gone, there is no explanation as to why the steel in the crank-pin strap should have broken. The break shows that the steel was without a flaw. The steamer was not making more than her usual time, running on the schedule she has followed for many years.

This is the third engine on big passenger boats which has "gone through itself" during the past month. The first was on the steamer Manitou of the Lake Superior line, and the next was on the big side wheeler Greyhound, running between Detroit and Port Huron. Steamboat men are hopeful that the fatal roundup of three has been made, and that there will be no more disasters of the kind this season.

GLADSTONE'S WILL PROBATED.

Forbids Any Laudatory Inscription Upon His Grave.

London, Sept. 6.—The will of the late William Ewart Gladstone was probated today. The gross estate devised is, in round numbers £59,000, and the net estate £54,732. The executors named are his sons—Stephen, Herbert and Henry Gladstone.

The document throughout is in the handwriting of Mr. Gladstone. It is a remarkable specimen of penmanship and entirely characteristic of the statesman in respect of the care of its preparation. The will is written in an ordinary memorandum book, with a codicil on foolscap paper.

In clause 2 Mr. Gladstone specifies that his burial be simple and private and in a place where his wife can also lie, and that "on no account shall any laudatory inscription be placed over me."

The next clause appoints the executors of his estate, and charges the possessor of Hawarden to bear in mind that he is endowed with the principal share of the worldly goods of the deceased, and to extend his good offices to the rest of the family.

All bequests are made conditional upon the renunciation by his wife, heirs and children and their issue of all other beneficial interests by general law, marriage or settlement in the estate.

To his grandson, William Gladstone, or failing him, to the possessor of Hawarden castle, he leaves his various books, prints, portraits, testimonials and interesting papers to preserve as heirlooms.

WORKED ALL NIGHT.

Pingree Saw No Sleep on Saturday Night But Cared for Soldiers With a Father's Hand.

CHEERED THE WEAK AND SICK.

The Boys Looked Upon Him As a Good Angel of Deliverance.

Detroit, Sept. 6.—Friday and Saturday Governor Pingree did the work of several men. His office was the busiest spot in the city. Seated at his desk, with a telephone receiver at his ear and a telegraph pad before him, surrounded by railroad and steamboat agents with whom he was figuring for transportation facilities, caterers of whom he was ordering refreshments for the boys en route and upon their arrival and messenger boys bringing telegrams.

After spending Saturday in his office doing work which would have completely exhausted the energy of the average man, Governor Pingree went to Toledo early Saturday evening to personally greet the returning boys and to see that his committees, appointed to provide for their comfort, were doing their duty.

The governor returned on the first section, and as he passed through the cars, speaking words of cheer to the weak, fever-ravaged boys, their eyes brightened and in their feeble way they tried to show their admiration for him.

Arriving at Detroit, Gov. Pingree was the most active man of all in assisting the sick boys off the train and directing them to their carriages.

"Now, mind, you're not to walk," he kept calling out. "Don't care whether you feel strong enough or not. The people of Detroit don't want you to walk. They've sent their carriages down here for you to ride in, and if I catch a mother's son of you walkin', I'll have you court-martialed."

Some of the sick ones did not like the idea of going to hospitals, and to these the governor would talk like a father.

"Now, see here, my boys," he would say. "You'll be better off in a hospital, where you'll have a good bed and a good nurse and the best of care. 'Tain't no division hospital you're goin' to. Now you just let these fellows carry you to the ambulance on their litter, and you'll be better off. That's right."

And so he busied himself, helping this one, advising and cheering another. He stayed right there at the depot all night long, until the last of the five sections was in and the last soldier had been well cared for. Then, without a wink of sleep, he went back to military headquarters and pitched into the problem of providing transportation for the boys throughout the state with as much energy as if he had spent the night in restful sleep. All day long he dispatched and answered telegrams, and worked to get the best possible facilities for getting the soldiers home.

THE Labor Day edition of the Grand Rapids Democrat was the prettiest and finest paper ever printed in Grand Rapids.

THEODORE Roosevelt will be the candidate of the New York republicans for governor and the famous colonel of the Rough Riders will sweep the state. Roosevelt's old enemy, Boss Platt, has even come out for the daring soldier. Every Rough Rider everywhere idolizes Roosevelt. Had every officer in camp and field been a Roosevelt much suffering in the war would have been spared.

THE republican county convention at Niles next Monday promises to have all the appearances of a democratic county convention. One of the matters to attract attention will be to settle the matter between two contesting Niles delegations. It is asserted that Maj. Duncan and a few others held a caucus before the advertised hour. As the major runs the Sun no one can prove his watch was fast.

A Narrow Escape.
"Ah, no!" she sighed. "There is nothing new under the sun."
He felt around for the mustache he thought he was raising and turned a beseeching look upon her.
"Of course," she went on, "that can't be classed as new. It looks several weeks old at least."
For a moment, however, she thought she had permitted the Coopelethwaite millions to get away.—Indianapolis Journal.

Freedom From a Terrible Slavery.
At last, I am thankful to say, the opera is dead. No longer shall my soul be corroded by the thought that I ought to be in my stall and am not. No longer when I am in my stall shall I writhe in anger to think of the stupidity of wasting my time so.—London Saturday Review.

THINK NOT AGAIN OF ME.
Dark sorrow's wings brood o'er my soul,
And 'neath their baneful power
My hopes have withered like the dews
Upon a blooming flower.
No more I roam the realms of bliss,
From pangs of anguish free,
Thy love must ne'er, ne'er be mine.
Think not again of me.
When in the halls of revelry,
Of music and of mirth,
Oh, I would have thee to forget
That e'er we met on earth!
I would not wreck thy bark of life
Upon an unknown sea.
Go share thy love with some fond heart
And waste it not on me.
The shell that is by ocean cast
Upon the sandy shore
Still in its secret, deep recess
Keeps echoing its roar.
So in my heart, which fate has thrown Upon love's hidden reef,
Still echoes my lost loved one's tones
Amid my tears of grief.

POWHATAN PIPES.
Made From a Peculiar Kind of Virginia Clay and Made Sweet by Fire.

The old coasting captain was gazing upon a crudely shaped red clay pipe which he smoked at the end of a long, many jointed reed stem, while he filled the ears of the observant Jerseyman with its praises.
"If you want the sweetest pipe in the world," he said, "you must get one of these. They are the original Powhatan pipes, made in Powhatan county, Va., out of a peculiar blue clay which is found there in little nodules and finished in a peculiar way."
"The genuine Powhatan pipe can never be found north of Baltimore, and it is easier to get one in Norfolk than in Baltimore. If you begin smoking one, you will discard your meerschaums and briar woods and smoke nothing else. When it gets strong, you merely put it into the fire and burn it sweet again. The imitation Powhatan pipes would crack to pieces if you try to burn them sweet, but the genuine can be thrust in safely right into the bright coals, although, of course, it is better to let them heat more gradually."
Under the stimulus of this praise the observant Jerseyman sent a friend in Norfolk for half a dozen of the pipes. After a time he received them, with a bill for 75 cents for the pipes and $5 for the trouble of finding them.
"If you had not told me that the pipes sold two for a quarter," his friend wrote, "I should never have got the right kind for you. I went to almost every tobacconist in Norfolk hunting for them. Each one showed me a pipe which looked about the same as these, but was only 10 cents. Finally, one day, after I had about given up the search, I happened to mention it to a long-horemán. 'There is only one shop in Norfolk,' he said, 'where you can get the genuine Powhatan pipe. That is a little place down along the river front.' He gave me the address, and there I found them."
The observant Jerseyman has smoked the Powhatan pipe many times since then, and he still believes the old captain's praise was warranted. On the caution label which came about each pipe it is said that the peculiar qualities of the genuine pipes are due to the fact that they are finished by hand polishing instead of a glazing, thus leaving to the clay all of its natural porosity and absorbent qualities.—New York Sun.

HAPPENS ONLY IN NOVELS.
British Emigration as English Writers See It and as It Really Is.

England no doubt loves us dearly, but the English authors have not yet discovered that fact in its entirety. Clark Russell, Max Pemberton and Anthony Hope, to say nothing of Conan Doyle and Rudyard Kipling, will have it that all Americans are Yankees, although they would resent the charge that all Englishmen are cockneys.
Another symptom of the drift is in relation to emigration from Great Britain. Statistics show that an enormous number of people come to this country from Great Britain, but the novelists never heard of it. Micawber and his interesting family went to Australia and got rich. So did every other emigrant that Dickens sent abroad, unless, like Martin Chuzzlewit and Mark Tapley, they were sent to this country to point a moral and adorn a tale. All English writers resemble Dickens in that respect. In their stories the emigrants all go to Australia, Canada, Africa—anywhere but the United States.
This trait comes under the head of "loyalty to the crown." They know perfectly well that the British emigrant, unless assisted by a British society, takes himself and belongings to this country, and even if the society kindly lands him in Canada he takes the first chance of skipping over the border. The only time he goes to the "colonies" with cheerful alacrity is in the pages of a British novel.—Chicago Times-Herald.

Swayed by a Play.
An impressive instance of a play that influenced a human life comes from one of the northern towns, where a very striking play was being performed in which the disastrous consequences following on the love of two men for the same woman were realistically presented. A young engineer who had conceived a violent affection for a girl who had resented his attentions in view of the fact that she loved another man, who chanced to be the engineer's bosom friend, witnessed this play one evening, and it made a very deep impression on him, as it seemed almost to have been written to apply to his own unhappy situation. Act by act the tragic story was unfolded, jealousy of the disappointed lover ending in crime and punishment, and when at length the curtain fell the engineer had come to a decision. He went home, packed up a few necessities and a week later set out for Australia, where, by a lucky stroke a year later, he made a mighty fortune. He attributed all his success to the play in question, for had he never seen it he would never have gone away from England, and perhaps some awful occurrence might have arisen from his unrequited passion.—London Standard.

Why Princeton Appealed to the Clevelands
"Shortly after the removal of the Cleveland family to Princeton an unmarried lady, a close friend of Mrs. Cleveland, was visiting her," writes a close friend of the former mistress of the White House in The Ladies' Home Journal. "One day while the two women were in the nursery with the three little Cleveland girls, the friend said jokingly to Mrs. Cleveland:
"Mercy me, Frances, how are you ever going to get all your daughters married off? You see from me that mamma could not do it in New York."
"Exactly," replied Mrs. Cleveland.
"But what better place could there be than a college town like Princeton, I should like to know?"

Birds Becoming Extinct.
From the New York Times: An investigation by the New York Zoological society into the destruction of bird and animal life in the United States has shown that in four-fifths of the area of the United States exclusive of Alaska, bird life is being annihilated, edible birds are rare and on the point of extinction, and plume birds are practically extinct. These conclusions have been reached after extensive correspondence with naturalists, ornithologists, game wardens and others in a position to speak authoritatively, and a report embodying the results of the investigation will be published in the annual report of the society.

Impermeable Umbrella Fabric.
Brussels has a factory which will meet with many imitators. In it a specialty is made of an impermeable fabric to be used in the construction of umbrellas, window shades, and many other articles, which is transparent, and may be washed off with cold water without being affected injuriously. Gelatine is dissolved, and muslin or similar materials treated with the solution; afterwards the product is treated with applications of linseed oil. That this will fill a long felt want is evident to those who have made much use of umbrellas in windy weather.

STERN DISCIPLINE.

It Is Necessary in War and the Soldier Must Learn to Submit.

One of Detroit's retired officers, who fought in two wars and helped for years to restrain the savage outbreaks of our Indians, thus delivered himself to the writer:

"The very hardest lesson a young American has to learn when he enters the army is that of obedience. For the first time, his individual authority is dethroned. He is as fractious as a thoroughbred colt that long rebels against the whip and spur. It is hard for him to understand that his freedom of action must be subordinated to military necessity. He chafes, if he does not openly rebel, but when once whipped into line he makes the best soldier on earth.

"My first drillmaster had been my friend and the friend of my family from my boyhood up. We had hunted and fished and courted together and exchanged secrets with a freedom that does not obtain among brothers. One day, early in my experience as a soldier, and while everything was being hurried with a view to getting us into Mexico, we had been drilling till I felt ready to drop. The repeated orders struck pain to my ears and I would have conscientiously sworn that my musket weighed a ton. At length, when within easy earshot of him, I shouted, 'For heaven's sake, Bob, stop this tomfoolery and let's go over to the tavern.'

"He never looked at me but roared, 'Corporal, take that man and drill him like the devil.'

"The corporal did, and I thought I'd die of exhaustion. I fully meant to challenge the drillmaster and whip him if he declined, but he succeeded in making me understand the imperative necessity of unquestioning obedience in the soldier. It's tough with the raw recruit, but the quicker he learns his part the better it is for all concerned."—Detroit Free Press.

Morrow's Discovery.

How the Great Chemist's Ideas Have Lessened Human Suffering.

Kidney Diseases That Once Were the Terror of Physicians, Robbed of Their Horror—When to Act.

Nature seldom strikes a severe blow at mankind without first giving warning. It is neglect of the warning that leads to disaster. The first warning, usually, that is given of impending danger of diabetes, Bright's disease or other kidney troubles, is a pain in the small of the back just over the kidneys. When the kidneys are not doing their work properly there is distress all over the body, because the blood remains impure; but, generally, a backache is one of the first and most certain symptoms of kidney disorder.

Wise people give a pain of this character immediate attention. Since the discovery by John Morrow, the celebrated American chemist, of Morrow's Kidneoids—those small, yellow tablets that contain nature's remedy for kidney disorders—this remedy has become a household article, and it is relied upon just as often to avert terrible kidney complaints, when they are threatened, as to cure cases of long standing.

When any of the symptoms of kidney irregularities appear, such as backache, nervousness, headache, irritable temper, pain in urinating, &c., it is best to take Morrow's Kidneoids at once and ward off disease before it becomes firmly rooted.

A recent case of interest in which Morrow's Kidneoids quickly gave relief is that of W. H. Vivion, a well-known milliner of 20 West Main Street, Springfield, Ohio. He gratefully tells the following story:

"I was afflicted with pains in my back over the kidneys, and my general health was somewhat impaired. Whenever I attempted to lift anything the pain would become so excruciating that I would be compelled to stop. I read of the many cures that were being made by Morrow's Kidneoids and decided to try them. One box quickly relieved me entirely of the pains, and my health is much improved generally. Morrow's Kidneoids are certainly a boon to suffering humanity."

Morrow's Kidneoids are now on sale everywhere at 50 cents a box, or six boxes for $2.50.

Morrow's Kidneoids are always put up in yellow tablet form; none are genuine otherwise. If you cannot get them of your dealer, will be sent postpaid by John Morrow & Co., Chemists, Springfield, Ohio, upon receipt of price.

Dr. McDonald has for years made a study and specialty of chronic and lingering diseases that require skillful medical treatment for their cure. Such cases as family physicians fail to help and pronounce incurable are particularly solicited, especially those over-dosed with strong mineral drugs and poisons. Dr. McDonald uses only the purest medicines from the vegetable kingdom. He pays attention to the cause of the disease and instructs his patients the way to health and happiness. Dr. McDonald can show hundreds of testimonials in the hand writing of grateful patients who have been cured by him when others failed. He is so familiar with the human system that he is able to read all diseases of the mind or body correctly at a glance without asking any questions. Thousands of invalids are being treated daily for diseases that they do not have, while a few drops of medicine directed to the seat of the disease would give speedy relief, and permanent cure in a very short time. Good health is the most precious jewel in our crown of happiness. With it the world is bright; without it, misery claims us for her own. If you are a sufferer you should weigh well these words: A person who neglects his health is guilty of a great wrong to himself and a grave injury to humanity. The name of Dr. McDonald, the well-known specialist in the cure of chronic and lingering diseases, has become a household word in thousands of homes which his skill and wonderful remedies have made happy by restoring dear ones to health after all hopes were lost. The doctor is a graduate of the highest and best medical colleges, and his advanced theories in the treatment of chronic diseases surprise the most skeptical. All chronic diseases of the

THE FARMER WON.

But Schaefer Considers It the Shortest Game of His Life.

"Some years ago," said a sporting man, "when Schaefer kept a billiard room in this city, he was always ready to play all comers who desired a game. Many strangers and people unknown to Schaefer naturally strolled in; many, too, who probably did not know him. But it made no difference to Schaefer. Sometimes strangers would desire to play for money, but this Schaefer would never do. To all such propositions he would say: 'No, I won't play for money, but I'll tell you what I will do—I will play a game, the loser to treat the house.'"

"One day an old farmer entered the place, and after wandering about looking at the pictures on the walls and examining the tables he asked if there was any one present who would like to play him a game of billiards. Schaefer, as usual, said that he would play the stranger.

"How much shall we play for?" asked the farmer.

"I never play for money," replied Schaefer, "but I will play you for the drinks for the house."

"All right," said the farmer. "How many points shall we play?"

"Oh," replied Schaefer demurely in all the consciousness of his superior powers, "we'll just play until you are satisfied, and we will call that a game."

"The crowd smiled as the players prepared for the contest. The balls were placed on the table, and Schaefer brought out his favorite cue, and it fell to his lot to open the game.

"The opening shot in a billiard game is a somewhat difficult one, as most players know, and Schaefer, probably through indifference, missed it. He not only missed it, but left the balls close together near one of the cushions. It was what is termed in billiard parlance a 'set up.'"

"The old farmer carefully chalked his cue, and after deliberation made the shot. He then gazed at the balls a moment, laid down his cue and exclaimed: 'I am satisfied.'"

"The score was then 1 to 0 in favor of the old farmer, but as Schaefer had agreed to make the game as long or short as the farmer desired he had to be satisfied. Schaefer of course had to invent a present, including his conqueror, to partake of the hospitality of the house. As the crowd laughed and drank Schaefer remarked that the game was the shortest he had ever played, and probably the shortest on record."—New York Tribune.

LOVED LIFE TOO WELL.

Ancient Natchez Indian Who Rebelled Against Being Sacrificed.

One of the repulsive features of the laws under which the Natchez Indians were governed was that when a member of the royal family of the nation died it was necessary that several others of the people should accompany him to the tomb by suffering death at the hands of executioners. When the "great sun," the hereditary chief of the whole nation, died, all his wives, in case he were provided with more than one, and also several of his subjects, were obliged to follow him into the vale of shadows. The "little suns," secondary chiefs, and also members of the royal family, likewise claimed, when dying, their tribute of death from the living. In addition to this, the inexorable law also condemned to death any man of the Natchez race who had married a girl of the royal line of the "suns." On the occasion of her death he was called upon to accompany her.

"I will narrate to you upon this subject," writes an old French chronicler of Louisiana, "the story of an Indian who was not in a humor to submit to this law. His name was Etteactel. He had contracted an alliance with the 'suns.' The honor came near having a fatal result for him. His wife fell sick, and as soon as he perceived that she was approaching her end he took to flight, embarking in a pirogue on the Mississippi, and sought a refuge in New Orleans. He placed himself under the protection of the governor, who was at that time M. de Bienville, offering himself to be the governor's hunter. The governor accepted his services, and interested himself in his behalf with the Natchez, who declared, in answer, that he had nothing to fear, inasmuch as he was no longer available as a candidate for execution."—New Orleans Picayune.

Flower Painters.

About the last literary work completed by the late Cornelia Stuart Wheeler was a beautiful tribute to "Some Court Painters to Queen Rose" published in The Woman's Home Companion, in which she says:

"As a rule, women make the best flower painters. The men who excel in this branch of art are comparatively few, even when we consider the small number of artists of both sexes who have acquired reputation in the picturing of flowers. The reason is not difficult to see. The average woman has a fondness for flowers which brings her into the closest sympathy with them and enables her to appreciate and understand them as men seldom do. In the interpretation of certain subtle phases of floral life her sensitive temperament and the peculiarly sympathetic feeling that she is apt to bring to her labor of love especially qualify her for engaging in this department of picture making. In point of technical ability some marvelously clever work has been done by artists of the gentler sex in the reproduction of flowers and in the treatment of difficult subjects."

SEEK METHODS THAT MAKE WELL. Allopathic, homeopathic, hydropathic, hygienic, psychopathic, electric, physio-medical, dosimetric, bio-chemic, official and other systems investigated and the best principles of each applied for conditions in which they have proven the most beneficial. No one school of medicine has all the good things, there is some one remedy that is best of all in each. The real physician must represent not one school system or party, but the healing art in all its entirety, study and compare all curative measures, then select and apply the pleasantest, safest and surer. It is better to cure by any system that will accomplish such result than be obstinately orthodox in methods. The motto of a true healer is "No code or creed, but cure."

TO THE PUBLIC it is but just to you and myself that I make some mention of my fitness for the work I would undertake. I come of a medical family. I have attended and hold credentials from leading colleges of various schools or systems of medicine. For years I have successfully conducted a large practice. I have held high office in state and national medical societies, and received honorary professional recognition abroad. I have had considerable hospital experience was an intimate associate of distinguished experts and familiar with their methods; am something of a medical author and have been professor in reputable medical colleges. These statements can be easily verified. If they commend me to your confidence it will give me pleasure to professionally advise and assist headward all who need and desire my services. THE VICIOUS JAGUAR

HE FINDS A DEADLY ENEMY IN THE PLUCKY PUMA.

These Fierce South American Brutes Fight
Each Other to the Death on Sight—Two Battles That Show the Characteristics of the Animals.

"On the Apure river, near its head, lives—or did live there five years ago—a woman of mixed Spanish and Indian race named Maria Padilla, the wife of the mayordomo, or foreman, of a cattle ranch. I have talked with her and heard from her lips the account of the strange adventure she had when a child of 7 years.

"Her parents with their children were making a journey over a trail that led along the foothills of the Maritime Andes. They had encamped for the night, and this child, while her parents' attention was occupied, started into the forest to gather firewood as she had often seen her mother do. Her absence was not noticed until she had been gone some time from the camp. As she gathered dry sticks into a bundle she saw a large, spotted animal stealing swiftly toward her.

"Every South American country girl of 7 knows a jaguar when she sees him, whether she has ever seen one before or not, for the dread of these animals is an instinct among the inhabitants of regions which they frequent. Overcome by fear the girl could only stand still and await her fate. With her eyes riveted on the jaguar she did not see where they came from, but of a sudden she perceived that he was savagely fighting with two huge, tawny animals that had sprung upon him.

"The fight seemed to her to last a long time, and once the brutes in their struggles came very near to where she stood. The pumas that had attacked him killed the jaguar at last, and after standing over the body a few minutes as if to assure themselves that he would not revive they for the first time turned their gaze toward the child, who had been too much terrified to improve her chance to run away while the beasts were fighting.

"They favored her with a long stare, and then, not offering to approach or harm her, turned deliberately away and trotted into the depths of the forest. They scarcely had disappeared when her father, having missed the child and guided by the sounds of the fight, came running to the place with gun and machete and found her safe. He got a jaguar skin as a trophy, though it was cut too nearly into ribbons by the pumas' claws to be of value.

"In the Great Pampa country, at a village called Parana, near the Merida trail, I saw an Indian named Jose Lolado whose face and head were deeply scarred and whose body was a network of similar scars from wounds received through being carried away by a jaguar when an infant in arms. Of course he could not remember the occurrence, but his mother, who had rescued him, described it to me.

"She had gone to a mata, or wooded spot, on the pampas for firewood, carrying her child, after the fashion of Venezuelan women of humble station, in a shawl looped from her shoulder. This shawl, with the small boy in it, she slung to a low tree branch while she gathered her bundle of sticks, and she did not perceive the approach of a jaguar until he had seized the child and was carrying it away.

"The mother grasped her machete and ran after the jaguar, shrieking. She managed to keep the beast in sight, but he was rapidly getting beyond her view when suddenly the jaguar stopped, put the child down and bristling for fight stood with his forepaws resting upon it.

"Then the mother saw that a puma was fronting the jaguar. She hurried on toward where the two beasts faced each other, growling and snarling. Before she got to them the puma sprang, and at once the two were fighting fiercely above the child. In the struggle the child was rolled to one side, but before the mother could get to it the jaguar broke away from the puma and springing to the boy again crouched with his paws above him as before.

"The puma leaped again and the fight was renewed, but again the jaguar got clear and jumped to guard his prey before the mother could get a chance to snatch her child. Once more the puma attacked his foe, and this time as the beasts struggled and tore each other an accidental kick from one of them sent the boy 20 feet away, almost to the mother's feet.

"Catching him up she ran for home and got safe to the house. The boy, though covered with claw wounds from head to foot and bearing deep marks of the jaguar's teeth in the back, where the beast had seized him to carry him away, recovered completely from his injuries, although bearing the scars for his lifetime. The puma and the jaguar were found, both dead, at the place where they had fought."—Philadelphia Times.

A Quick Witted Baptist.

One of the candidates for the state senate down in Jefferson county, Ala., was a prominent Baptist, and he expected his fellow churchmen to help push him along. The story goes that he was campaigning on a country beat and had the good fortune to fall in with a whole congregation of Baptists. Whether a prayer meeting had just been held or what the occasion of the gathering was is not known. About this time a light shower came up, and the candidate at once raised a large umbrella which he was carrying.

"You are not afraid of this little shower, are you, Brother?" remarked one good Baptist, standing near. "Not at all," responded the quick witted candidate, "but you know I am opposed to all forms of 'sprinkling.'"

He carried that beat solidly.—You O.

SHERWOOD QUARTETTE FIRST

And Leland T. Powers Will Give the Last Entertainment in the Series.

Oct. 19—Sherwood Quartette.
Nov. 29—Dr. Robert McIntyre, lecture, "Buttoned Up People."
Jan. 3—John Thomas concert company.
Jan. 31—Col. Copeland, lecture,

Garrick."

The Benton Harbor lecture committee met last night and organized by the election of L. G. Smith as president,
C. J. Brown as secretary and F. W.
Sessions as treasurer. The other members of the committee are J. H. Herr and Rev. W. P. French.

Contracts were signed for the talent named above. The price of season tickets will be the same as last year, $1.

This is the best lecture course to be given in the state this season, while the usual price of course tickets in other cities is $1.50. The talent booked for this season is better throughout than that of any previous year.

The Sherwood quartette, which opens the course, is composed of a company of the finest singers on the road.
Miss Jenny Osborn, the soprano, sings with Theodore Thomas and is one of the best singers in the United States.
The other members of the company have won distinction. The program is all musical. No reader is carried by this high class concert company.

The second number is the famous address of Rev. Dr. McIntyre on "Buttoned Up People." Dr. McIntyre is one of the few great lecturers of the day and no one yet ever heard him and went away disappointed.

On January 3 will appear the John Thomas concert company. John Thomas is the funniest man in America. No audience ever saw him without breaking into wild applause.
Mr. Thomas is accompanied by Annie Webster Thomas violin virtuoso, Albert Hopkins, pianist, and Edna Marie Gouillard, soprano. The press speaks in highest praise of this company.

Col. Copeland, the lecturer who captured Benton Harbor in a single engagement of two hours last winter, will be back January 31 and complete the plans for the surrender of the city with his lecture, "Seeing the Elephant."
Leland T. Powers, the choice of Benton Harbor as an entertainer, will close the course on February 11 with his rendition of "David Garrick."

BABCOCK STILL.

Resignation as County Chairman
Not Accepted.

He Is Agreeable to the Candidates.

The democratic county committee and the candidates for office on the democratic ticket met at Hotel Benton yesterday afternoon and decided to retain Hon. James M. Babcock of Niles as county chairman.

The memory of the average democrat reaches back to the last county convention where "Jim" Babcock was coaxed and entreated to resign the county chairmanship in order to accept the nomination for treasurer. Mr.
Babcock promised to resign.

The promise was kept and at the committee meeting yesterday Mr. Babcock resigned. The resignation was refused and Mr. Babcock continues as county chairman and also candidate for county treasurer.

Fred B. Collins resigned as county committeeman from the fourth ward of Benton Harbor and F. M. Van Horn, the strongest Pingree man in the city, was elected to succeed Mr. Collins.

BEDS NO GOOD.

Soldiers Preferred to Sleep on the Floor.

E. F. Callahan, one of the publishers of Headlight Flashes, gave up his room at Hotel Benton Sunday night to two soldiers. The boys were tucked in bed and an hour afterwards they declared that they couldn't sleep and rolled a blanket about them and slept on the floor. "If I only could have a sharp rock between my shoulders," said one of the boys, "then I could sleep." This was the experience of most of the boys.
After sleeping on the hard ground of Cuba for weeks they could not rest in a soft bed.

A NEW TRIAL.

French Sentiment Turning in Favor of Dreyfus.

Paris, Aug. 9.—An official announcement that Dreyfus will have a new trial is momentarily expected. The new minister of war favors revision.
The cabinet, it is reported, has been discussing the conditions under which a new trial shall take place and the plan includes bringing Dreyfus to France secretly.

The Petite Republique says that in his last letter to his wife Dreyfus prayed that the government would order a revision trial.

Worth Knowing About Fruits.

If a man persists in using or trying to use that for which he has neither power for digestion nor assimilation, he must, without doubt, pay the penalty. To many persons strawberries are such a violent poison that a single dish will produce a rash in less than two hours. The cooking of the fruit seems to destroy this active, irritating principle, but again, here comes our fashion of adding sugar. Canned or preserved fruit, as well as jams and kindred articles, are to be condemned on account of the mass of sugar used.
With the fruits it is more prone to fermentation, and even if the sugar is inverted we have a far greater amount than can be cared for by the liver, and here is the origin of the "torpid liver" we hear so much about. The liver is not torpid at all, it is simply overworked. The given capacity is exhausted.—Mrs. S. T. Rorer in Ladies' Home Journal.

The Original Declaration of Independence

The original Declaration of Independence is in so dilapidated a condition that nowadays it is rarely if ever exposed to public view. The Ladies' Home Journal was recently granted special permission by the secretary of state to make a single exposure of the document to the camera, and will reproduce the photograph, which is a remarkably clear one, in the July issue of that magazine. Exposure to light and the process of making a duplicate copy of the declaration have faded the ink in the historic document, but it is still legible. Some of the signatures are nearly faded out. John Hancock, however, seems to have used an imperishable ink, for his name stands black and bold on the parchment, which is now kept in a steel safe, out of the sunlight and out of the public's view.

RELIABILITY

is a quality some newspapers have lost sight of in these days of "yellow" journalism. They care little for truth and a great deal for temporary sensation.

It is not so with THE CHICAGO RECORD.

The success of THE RECORD rests upon its reliability.
It prints the news—all the news—and tells the truth about it.

It is the only American newspaper outside New York city that has its own exclusive dispatch boat service and its own staff correspondents and artists at the front in both hemispheres.

It is the best illustrated daily newspaper in the world.
Its war news service is unapproachably the best.

Says the Urbana (Ill.) Daily Courier:

"We read the war news in the other papers, then we turn to THE CHICAGO RECORD to see how much of it is true."

Sold by newsdealers everywhere and subscriptions received by all postmasters. Address THE CHICAGO RECORD, 124
